

Careers in International Development and Environment Planning

As a recognized specialist across International Financial Institutes (IFIs), Dr. Green has drafted policy, written guidance and worked directly with a multitude of developing country agencies on project design, implementation and supervision. He has coordinated, managed and administered complex projects and scientific studies and understands how to approach development planning and produce result. During these decades that Dr. Green has worked on these activities he has come to understand the elements of good analytical practices and the methods for completing solid products. He regularly conducts workshops and teaching programs to provide practical insight for junior and senior staff and professionals across disciplines. In all his presentations, he combines solid technical approaches to basic learning experiences, whether in small or large gatherings. Attendees leave with a rich and deep understanding of the opportunities and pathways available for further professional growth.